Course Overview

“There is no way out of the game of culture...”
- Pierre Bourdieu

Debates about what constitutes “culture” and “how culture matters” abound in both scientific and popular accounts of social life. Even within the field of sociology the term “culture” is contested and frequently used in diverse ways to refer to vastly different phenomena—e.g. art products, values, group practices, semiotic systems, and symbolic resources. This course attempts to make sense of both this ubiquity and murkiness by focusing on three key questions that drive contemporary debates in the sociology of culture: 1. How can/should we conceptualize culture?, 2. How do various aspects of culture shape action and outcomes on the micro-, mezzo, and macro levels? and 3. How might social scientists examine these relationships empirically? In investigating these questions, students will gain both a general overview of ongoing debates in the sociology of culture and be poised to identify sites for new contributions.

Requirements and Grading

This is an intensive graduate course. All students are expected to complete the assigned readings prior to class and to actively participate in seminar discussions. There are three additional requirements:

1. Each week students should bring a brief (<2 page) memo summarizing the argument, evidence, implications, and limitations of each reading. Each memo should conclude by synthesizing what the set of readings contributes to the topic for the week and where future research can contribute.
2. Each week 1 or 2 students will be assigned to make a brief 5-10 minute presentation on the readings and introduce key questions to help guide the discussion.
3. Two weeks after the last class, students will turn in a short research paper “without results.” The paper should be written up to the point were findings would be presented (i.e. intro, background/theory, data/case, research design, etc.). This paper should be roughly 12-15 pages double-spaced. The idea is to begin a paper that can be completed and submitted to a professional conference such as the American Sociological Association (ASA) annual meeting.

Grades will be based on participation and completion of the requirements above. To receive an A students must do the following:
• Miss no more than 2 seminars.
• Contribute to discussions every week.
• Miss no more than 2 memos.
• Complete a compelling final paper.

To Receive the equivalent of an A+ students must additionally:
• Demonstrate mastery of the material in discussions.
• Produce an exceptional paper.

Readings
This course involves intensive reading and discussion. There are several required books, which can be purchased from various booksellers:

All other readings will be posted online via D2L.
* = Only select segments of the book will be read.

Additional University and Departmental Policies

Accessibility and Accommodations

It is the University’s goal that learning experiences be as accessible as possible. If you anticipate or experience physical or academic barriers based on disability, please let me know immediately so that we can discuss options. You are also welcome to contact Disability Resources (520-621-3268) to establish reasonable accommodations. For additional information on Disability Resources and reasonable accommodations, please visit http://drc.arizona.edu/.

If you have reasonable accommodations, please plan to meet with me by appointment or during office hours to discuss accommodations and how my course requirements and activities may impact your ability to fully participate.

Please be aware that the accessible table and chairs in this room should remain available for students who find that standard classroom seating is not usable.

Student Code of Academic Integrity

Students are encouraged to share intellectual views and discuss freely the principles and applications of course materials. However, graded work/exercises must be the product of independent effort unless otherwise instructed. Students are expected to adhere to the UA Code of Academic Integrity as described in the UA General Catalog. See: http://deanofstudents.arizona.edu/codeofacademicintegrity.

The University Libraries have some excellent tips for avoiding plagiarism available at: http://www.library.arizona.edu/help/tutorials/plagiarism/index.html.

According to Section D (6) (a) of the University’s Intellectual Property Policy (which is available at http://www.ott.arizona.edu/uploads/ip_policy.pdf), faculty own the intellectual property for their course notes and course materials. The instructor holds the copyright to his/her lectures and course materials, including student notes or summaries that substantially reflect them. Student notes and course recordings are for individual use or for shared use on an individual basis. Selling class notes and/or other course materials to other students or to a third party for resale is not permitted without the instructor’s express written consent. Violations to the instructor’s copyright are subject to the Code of Academic Integrity and may result in course sanctions. Additionally, students who use D2L or UA email to sell or buy these copyrighted materials are subject to Code of Conduct Violations for misuse of student email addresses.

Confidentiality of Student Records
